

"An intimate wedding of fifty guests meant we could focus on spending time with our closest family and friends. A heavy Anglican service, rich with music, was planned. I had a ring given to my mother by my late father restyled into a lapel pin by Elizabeth Adams Jewelers. Addison carried a timepiece belonging to his great grandfather. The flower girl and ring bearer announced our arrival with the ringing of glass bells that could be heard over the symphony of music. As we entered the church to the music of 'I Was Glad,' the joy and theme of the day was set."
